

Name.....

What happened... before?

Here is the end of the story. You need to write the rest of it.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.

No one ever saw him again. He soon became nothing but a distant memory for the few people that had once know him - and most of those started to question whether he'd simply been a figment of their imagination. But one person never gave up hope - never stopped believing, despite all the years that had passed. This is why they were not surprised when they received the letter.